ArtPrize Jury Shortlist ‘T-Rex’ film to screen again 7 p.m. Saturday at Michigan House

Documentary on Michigan native, Gold Medal Boxer part of inaugural ArtPrize OnScreen: Presented by Waterfront Film Festival

Grand Rapids, Mich., Oct. 2, 2015 – ‘T-Rex’, the story of Flint-native and Olympic Gold Medalist Claressa “T-Rex” Shields will be available to audiences again 7 p.m. Saturday in a free showing at Michigan House, 40 Pearl Street NW.

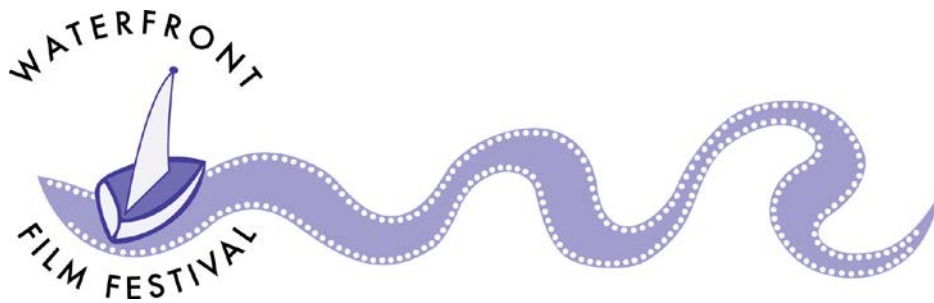

There will be limited seats offered on a first come, first served basis on the night of the screening.

The film was chosen as a Top 5 entry for Time-Based works at ArtPrize Seven, which continues through Oct. 11.

“T-Rex” is eligible for the $12,500 category prize and is in contention for the $200,000 grand prize.

ArtPrize OnScreen: Presented by Waterfront Film Festival screened the documentary twice, to students and a general audience, on the opening Friday of ArtPrize.

The film follows the 17-year-old boxer through early struggles and on to her spot with the first ever Women’s Olympic Boxing Team. “T-Rex” was made by the Oakland, Calif.-based directorial team of Zackary Canepari and Drea Cooper, and New York City producer Sue Jaye Johnson. Canepari is expected to be in attendance for the Saturday screening.

“Being shortlisted for something as prestigious as ArtPrize is obviously very exciting for us, especially since ArtPrize is such a Michigan staple and Claressa’s story is such a Michigan story,” Co-Director Zackary Canepari said. “While we always wanted to reach a big, wide audience with ‘T-Rex’, we also really wanted the film to be well received inside of Michigan. So for obvious reasons, this is a true honor for our film.”

Shari Frilot, Curator of New Frontier at Sundance Film Festival, included the film among her Top 5 shortlist for the category, stating that she was taken by its portraiture in documentary and “density of form and layers”.

“This is a remarkable documentary about a teenage woman... who wanted to be a boxer,” said Frilot during a live announcement of the juried shortlist on Wood TV 8 news. “She was in an all-male gym and the coach saw champion potential. The film follows her from those beginnings to her bid for a spot on the U.S. Olympic Team.

The film was co-sponsored at ArtPrize OnScreen by the West Michigan Film Office, Zonta Club of Grand Rapids, and Michigan Film & Digital Media Office. Shields also joined the audience via Skype for a Q&A with a packed audience following the screening of the film, an educational effort by Waterfront and the film’s co-sponsors, and in association with Mosaic Film Experience.

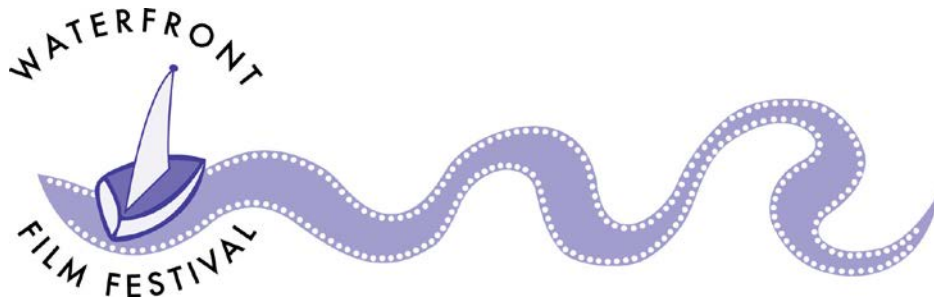

Three new ArtPrize jurors will tour the Top 20 and choose the award winner from each category; 2D, 3D, Time-Based and Best Venue. The judges are Brooklyn-based artist Wangechi Mutu, Chicago-based artist Michael Rakowitz and Dan Cameron, an independent curator and founder of Prospect New Orleans.
